

Divine Touch

I have been a clinical social worker for 50 years, and became a spiritual psychotherapist and wellness coach along the way. I began exploring the possibility that I could be of help with hands-on healing 25 years ago. While I had received a great deal of energy work and body work in my life, I had not considered that I might offer it to others until I was encouraged to do so by friends whom I greatly respect, professionals in the field of health and healing.

Sadhu Khalsa, MSW, LCSW

I received personal inspiration that led me to a practice that is both unique and yet linked to the ancient history of hand-on healing. I prepare myself by offering prayers that I may be a channel for the individual's highest good. I hold a person's feet and find the pulse points. I ask each person to bring forth an intention, and to send themselves light and love throughout the session. While mostly we sink into the quiet experience together, it is not uncommon for me to speak to a person, if I am guided. People often tell me that these words address issues that are troubling them. Many people experience that their natural life force energy begins to flow more strongly; some may become aware of it for the first time. The energy goes to where it needs to go; it has its own knowing, which I trust. And invariably, as we inhabit the sacred space we have created together, people experience deep relaxation and inner peace.

I call this experience Divine Touch, because it seems to connect each of us to our higher power, our Source. I am honored to be able to offer it to you.
